packed with striking heroism and drama, this can be the legitimate tale of the British Army's so much adorned unit - its Northern Ireland bomb disposal squadron. 321 EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) Squadron used to be published to Northern Ireland on the outset of the worries to supply bomb disposal expertise. because then it has replied over 50,000 'bomb scare' calls, over 5,500 of them A Special Kind of Courage to house real devices. it truly is most unlikely to estimate the variety of lives, or worth of property, stored by means of A Special Kind of Courage its work. however the expense is clear. Conspicuous braveness is a vital qualification and 321 EOD is the main embellished unit within the complete British Army. Its contributors were offered 2 George Crosses, 29 George Medals and 281 different medals for striking gallantry. 20 officials have misplaced their lives; 24 were significantly injured. One nonetheless serves regardless of the lack of a hand. it's grimly applicable that the unit has as its mascot and radio call-sign the sketch cat, Felix, along with his 9 lives and talent to resist mayhem. As peace emerges in Northern Ireland, 321 EOD is now able to inform its tale for the 1st time. Written with its complete co-operation, a different type of braveness lines the heritage and improvement of bomb disposal and using explosives by means of terrorists; the human braveness and A Special Kind of Courage methods used to counter it; and the foreign measurement - how violent progressive teams abroad, resembling ETA in Spain, copied the tools of Irish terrorists. It describes how 321 EOD's pioneering units - significantly the remote-controlled 'wheelbarrow' - were exported round the world, incomes it a world services that's sought via many different international locations dealing with the A Special Kind of Courage specter of terrorism. Written with the entire co-operation of prior and current individuals of the squadron, and with a brand new Postscript for the paperback edition, this is often the intense tale of the courage, ability and funky professionalism of the main embellished unit within the British Army.
